COMPENSATION

Or all the different ways employees get paid

Language and citations in this flyer refer to the 2012-14 contract for Units 2, 5, 7, and 9

Compensation, the way employees are paid, can be complex. Employees must be proactive in order to secure the increases that their work merits. All employees should make it their business to know and understand the contract and their campus compensation process.

There are several ways to receive salary increases:

General Salary Increase (GSI)
A GSI is an across-the-board increase for all CSUEU-represented employees. It is intended to address cost-of-living changes but is not tied to the Consumer Price Index. The amount of the GSI depends on state funding (Sections 20.3-20.4).

In-Range Progression (IRP)
An IRP is a salary increase within the salary range or sub-range of a classification or skill level. The intent of an IRP is to provide employees who are not at the top of their pay range with a way to move through their salary range as they assume additional responsibilities and skills. An IRP can also be granted to recognize:

- new lead work or project coordination functions assigned by the appropriate administrator on an ongoing basis
- out-of-classification work that does not warrant a reclassification
- performance, retention, equity, or other salary-related criteria

It carries a minimum increase of 3.0 percent and no maximum. Each campus has its own guidelines and procedures. Human Resources must complete IRP reviews within 90 days of receiving the request. Employees should document increased responsibilities/skills since their last reclassification or in-class progression. The funding for an IRP may come from campus funds or systemwide funds that are bargained between CSUEU and CSU (Section 20.24-20.25 and KYR #11).

Reclassification
The CSU Office of the Chancellor issues Classification and Qualification Standards (CQS) that define each classification. Every employee is assigned to a classification based upon the duties in his or her specific position description. When the assigned duties change so that a significant portion of the duties appear in a higher-level classification, a classification review should be requested. An updated position description is very helpful. Union stewards can help employees organize their request for a classification review. An employee who is reclassified receives at least a five (5) percent salary increase (Sections 9.24-9.28 and KYR #01).

For out-of-classification work that does not warrant a reclassification, an IRP may be appropriate (Section 20.24).

In-Class Progression
Certain classifications, such as Information Technology Consultants, have different skill levels. An in-class progression refers to movement to a higher skill level within the same classification. In-class progression generally follows the same procedures as reclassification (Sections 9.24-9.32, as well as KYR flyer #1). However, instead of demonstrating that the assigned duties justify a higher classification, the employee only needs to show that his or her skills justify a higher level. An In-Class Progression is generally easier to attain than a reclassification and represents a natural progression to higher-level duties within the same position. Salary increases are at least five (5) percent (Section 9.25).
